Wealthy Resident of N. Y. Threatened by Bride's Unsuccessful Suitor

New York, April 9.-Vincenzo Schaino De Pepe, a wealthy resident of the Bronx, who arrived from Italy tonight with his bride said he had eceived letters from the Black Hand threatening his life because he married his boyhood sweetheart, whom a Black Hand leader coveted. Before sailing from Italy with his wife, he received letters declaring the hostility of the Black Hand would follow him to America. He went on board the Roma guarded by a dozer Italian policemen After the ship sailed seven stowaways were found on board, one of them who was heavily armed, was life-preservers, and combines several identified as a cousin of Pepe's defeat-

Flint, Mich., April 6 -Among those who mourn the disappearance of little Harold Moon, the Flint boy, who is upposed to have been kidnaped, are Harold's little brother and sister Ralph, 13 years old, and Marna, 17 years old. Their anguish is most pa thetic, for they loved little Harold "If you have the credulity to think with all their hearts, and brutal kidnaper is almost beyond their power of endurance. NEW LIFE-PRESERVER

Consul Thomas H. Norton, in a report from Chemnitz, states that interest in safety appliances is steadily increasing in Germany, as public sentiment is awakened by the growing number of dls asters on land and water. The consul's description of the following new device will therefore be of interest:

"A valuable adjunct for protecting life at sea and on the coast is offered by the newly introduced Nowotnick life-pre server, the invention of J. S. Nowotnick of Hamburg. This device differs very materially from the prevalent types of novel and valuable features. It consists of a hollow belt of rubber five and one quarter inches in diameter. The end consist of flat plates of the same diameter, furnished with the requisite attachments, so that the belt can be quickly and easily hooked together beneath tne arms. Closely fastened to the upper IS SUPPOSED TO HAVE surface of the belt is a small meallie cylinder, filled with liquid carbon dioxid On turning a tap the liquefied gas es capes at once into the belt, volatizes and inflames it to its fullest capacity, viz. 27 1-2 quarts. The whole operation of attaching and inflating the belt requires 30 seconds. The buoyancy of such a belt is equivalent to 55 pounds.

The advantages of this device over th customary belts are twofold. In the first place the buoyancy of such an inflated best is uniform at all points, so as to allow a perfectly vertical position in water to any person wearing it. Secondly, its buoyancy far surpasses that of the current types, filled with cork or reindeer hair. Thus an ordinary cork belt, weigh ing 8 pounds, sustains a weight of 16 pounds. The gas-inflated belt, weighing only 44 pounds, sustains a weight of 55 pounds. A cork belt of the same buoyancy would weigh over 26 pounds. The new preserver has been shown by repeated demonstration to be admirably adapted for the wants of the average person, supporting the body so that the head is far above the surface of the water. A type having a diameter of inches has been devised for the use of exceptionally corpulent persons. It supports a weight of 71 1-2 pounds. It is planned to make an extended use of these rubber life-preservers at seaside resorts.

We have three blessings no man had When under Pagan rule, We have three things to make us glad. The court house, church and school, Le modern court house seldom fails To shelter every truth, Chere Justice balances her scales To favor Age and Youth.

The church is every person's friend. And there His spirit may descend And come down like a dove. It has its mission to fulfill, To show all men the light, The "peace on earth" and the good will That came on Christmas night.

The school is now a public gift. To bless each future day, And forms of ignorance now drift Like empty clouds away. And knowledge waves her fairy wand Inside the school house door. And in the future's great beyond She plans to give us more.

These blessings are a public good, Three blessings-all in one Their power now is understood, The best has now begun. The Lord of Life and Light has planned The way men ought to rule-... c court house, church and school.
